

When you say Merry Christmas to someone but they live in another timezone

Australian wakes up (7am)

Brit is working, gets a call (10pm)

Aus: Merry Christmas!

Brit: it's not Christmas yet

Aus: it's 7am here which means It's Christmas day!

Brit: It's July

Aus: ...

Brit: Today's the 6th of July

Aus: Then Happy July Sixth Park!

Brit: what?

Aus: yep this was all a set up to tell you about July Sixth P-

Brit: what's July Sixth Park

Aus: I was just about to tell you

Brit: It sounds stupid

Aus: no it's not stupid

Brit: it sounds stupid

Aus: it's not stupid it's like a watch along for a movie

Brit: it sounds stupid

Aus: July Sixth Park is an annual holiday where everyone celebrates by watching Jurassic Park! The classic 1993 movie about dinosaurs, capitalism and learning to not hate kids / overcoming a disdain for children

Brit: Okay but why are you telling me about this

Aus: it's just a special interest of mine that I wanted to share with you. It's silly but it's a fun little thing I've been celebrating for 5 years now, and part of what makes it fun is getting my friends involved and experiencing it with them.

Brit: 😊😊😊 sounds like a cult

Aus: no it's not a cult

Brit: it sounds like a cult

Aus: it's not a cult it's just an annual watch party of a movie

Brit: Also I'm not in England

cut to wide angle shot of both people in frame

Brit: Why did you call me?

Aus: so we could make the video

Brit: have you been recording me?

Aus: well yeah for the footage

Brit: you are a weirdo I'm leaving

Aus: 😞